

TRICKS TO SAVE ON SUMMER TRAVEL

If you're planning a summer getaway, better start hunting for deals. Procrastinating could be a financial miss. Here's how to make sure you're scoring a deal:

1) Rethink trip planning
Rather than picking a specific destination and then trying to find deals, start by thinking about what you'd like in a trip — say, a beach trip or hiking. Then search to see which spots have better pricing from your home airport for a summer trip.

2) Target your search
Don't limit your hunt to just one search site, or just the big names. In a recent analysis of airfare booking, Frommer's found that Momondo and Skyscanner consistently spotted the lowest fares. On the hotel side, Booking.com took top honors.

3) Compare timing
If you have flexibility on the timing of your trip, compare prices to see if you might score extra savings by picking one week over another. Families often time trips around the end and start of the school year, so you might see better pricing if you can travel when most kids are still in class.

4) Look beyond hotels
Some of the more comprehensive lodging search sites now incorporate "nontraditional" options like vacation rentals and short-term shares. Savings extend beyond nightly rates, she said. Amenities like a kitchen and laundry room can cut on-the-ground costs, and you might also score free parking.
